San Pietro is a domed church built on the island of San Pietro and separated from the town by the broad Canal di S. Pietro. It is an ancient foundation, which was the cathedral of the Patriarch of Venice from 1451 to 1807, when Napoleon transferred the Patriarchate to St. Mark's. The façade was erected by Smeraldi in 1594-6, and the handsome campanile dates from 1474.
